This army is one of the most vicious in the world. No one knows for sure where or when it will fight next. Nothing can _____ this army. This army has millions of soldiers, intimidating in its size and power. Yet none of the soldiers can see, hear, or speak. The soldiers are ants.

Army ants live in large colonies in Africa, Asia, and Central America. A large army colony may have as many as 30 million ants. Special ants, called scouts, go out first to _____ food. They may find some big insects. When they locate their target, they'll leave a smell to guide other ants to the food.

Then the army _____ by surprise in lines up to 65 feet wide. The trapped animals cannot get away. The unfortunate insects are carried back to feed all of the other hungry ants. Most ants will feast on those captured little insects. _____, some army ants eat larger animals like horses and goats. Some ants are even known to attack people.

Surprisingly, many people are _____ when army ants come to their villages. Why? The ants eat field mice or other animals that damage people's homes or consume their food. The ants drive away these harmful animals. When the ants move on, the people move back into their "clean" villages.
